

LOUISVILLE JOURNAL
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY
PRENTICE, HENDERSON, & OSBORNE,
Green Street, between Third and Fourth.

CED. D. PRENTICE,
PAUL R. SHIFFMAN, Editors

UNION STATE CONVENTION.

The majority of the Convention Committee appointed by the Union Convention of the State of Kentucky, that assembled in Louisville on the 15th of March, 1863, consider it their duty to call another Convention.

Whereas, it is the opinion of the people of our State who stand upon and endorse the platform adopted by the Union Democratic Convention held in the city of Louisville on the 15th of March, 1863, that they do not desire to carry it out, be requested to select delegates to a Convention to be held in the said city on the 1st day of May next, for the purpose of forming a State convention, which will be delegates to the Union Conservative National Convention which meets in the city of Chicago on the 4th of July next.

JAMES M. COOPER, Chairman,
GEORGE D. PRENTICE,
R. KNOTT,
GEO. P. DOERN,
HAMILTON POPE.

MONDAY, MARCH 21, 1864.

The Frankfort Commonwealth, we observe, publishes what is styled a "Call for a Union Convention," to meet in this city on the 1st day of May next, for the purpose of effecting objects of union, which were the persons represented in the meeting shall send delegates to Baltimore or Chicago. That is to say, the radicals have called a convention to determine whether they will go with the radicals or with the conservatives. What profound struggle! What imperious calling! The project of this device must surely live by a very exalted opinion of the sense of Kentuckians.

Governor Bramlette's PROCLAMATION.—We publish this morning the Proclamation of Governor Bramlette to the people of Kentucky, in which he says: "I have been induced to believe that either he has modified his views since he remonstrated with the President against the enforcement of the draft, or those views are no longer held by him, for he has now sent me a telegraphic message to that effect. He makes no threats now, suggests no resistance, sets up no local law against the authority of the Government, but, on the contrary, has agreed to do all that can be done to help us. I have no objection to his doing so, but, whether his partisans, but, whether in the general peace of Europe can be preserved in the midst of struggles now for the principles of nationality, and now for this preservation of dynastic authority, must be resolved by the future turns of the wheel of chance."

To make the broad front still broader, if possible, the signs of the gall, so far as they are known politically at all, are known to be in open affiliation with the abolition party of the country. They all agree in repudiating the platform of the Union party of Kentucky. Not one of them stands or professes to stand upon that platform. Not one of them is a member of the Union party of the State; for he who disowns the declared basis of a party disowns the party.

While, however, they all agree in now occupying a position of hostility to the Union party of Kentucky, they do not agree so fully in their methods of proceeding. Some are really uncompromising abolitionists, some Unionists, and some secessionists. For example, R. K. Williams, who heads the list, and who not long ago was engaged some ten or fifteen days in privately beating up a meeting in the county of Graves to induce Mr. Lucien Anderson, wrote the following letter two days after the fall of Sumter:

Mayfield, Ky., April 6, 1861.
Editors Democrat, Louisville:

It seems that a war policy has been determined on, and that we are to be precipitated into a civil war, without even time for a peaceful solution of our present national difficulties.

I suppose that war was inaugurated with such vigor and speed, and so away from the Slave State Convention, as to render it useless longer to keep up our ticket.

The Union Democratic party have discharged a whole duty of precipitating a most difficult conflict that even helped a great people. And the cry is equally as false in respect to Colonel Wofford, whose position is identical with that of Governor Bramlette. Neither has so much as hinted at unconstitutional resistance.

The position of Governor Bramlette in this exigency is the position of Governor Seymour in the exigency which arose out of the enforcement of the Fugitive Slave Law.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

My object in writing this is to request my name to be withdrawn from the Union Democratic party. Not that I am any taller than a distended county. Especially

R. K. WILLIAMS.

M. B. Benton, again, who supports the centre of the list, and whose certain political character is sufficiently notorious, was so elated by the victory of the rebels at Bull Run, as has been asserted universally, as never dreamed of before, and so carried into the country in order to have room enough to assert his rights.

While it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of the country. The only Union party to the membership of which they have been ascribed universally, is never mentioned.

While I believe it would be a wise and honest policy to have procured a judicial decision with regard to the constitutionality of the conscription act at an early day and by a sufficient majority, yet the time is not ripe for such a decision. We are not yet in the hands of the National Legislature. The antagonistic doctrine that men may rightfully resist laws opposite to their own ideas of right or duty, has not yet been established. We are not yet in the hands of our constituents.

This is Governor Bramlette's position; and, as the people of New York sustain the Governor in this position, so will the people of Kentucky sustain their noble Chief Magistrate.

It is sufficient to know, that, whenever they may have said or done heretofore, they all unite now in repudiating the Union party of Kentucky and in espousing the abolition party of

MONDAY, MARCH 21, 3 A.M.

PREPAMENT OF CORRESPONDENCE.—Many correspondents send us heavy manuscripts upon which the full quota of postage is prepaid. Were it merely necessary for us to make good the deficiency, we could not object; but the regulations of the post office demand extra double charges for the additional weight of letters on the part of those who write to us, involves no considerable item of expense. If a single stamped envelope contains five ounces of manuscript, which would take in three cent stamps to pay for, but it is sent with a single stamp, it will cost us fifty-cent cts. A little attention, therefore, on the part of our friends will be a great recommendation to us.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR J. B. FLINT.—The news of the death of Prof. Flint reached this community early on Sunday morning. He was a very energetic professor, but during his residence here, he retired home to recuperate, ate very sparingly, went from the table into his office, where he was soon after seized with pleurisy, and died about seven o'clock Saturday morning. He was one of the most eminent men in his profession in the United States, and was esteemed by his mulititudinous virtues to his professional brethren and to the whole community. We shall endeavor hereafter to do some justice to the memory of this worthy man. In another column will be found the proceedings of the Medical Faculty of the University of Louisville, in which institution Professor Flint held the chair of Clinical Surgery. The physicians are to hold a meeting at 10 o'clock this morning to express their sentiments toward Prof. Flint.

GENERAL McCLELLAN'S REPORT.—It turns out that the alleged omission in the Congressional edition of General McClellan's Report do not in fact exist. The allegation was a mistake. The matter supposed to be missing is found, and found in a proper context, though not in the precise context which embraces the matter in the edition of Sheldon & Company. We very gladly make this correction. We will add that the edition of the report issued by the Boston Courier, and for sale by W. F. Thompson & Company in this city, is one of the most accurate as well as one of the very cheapest editions that had yet appeared.

A despatch was received at the headquarters of General Burbridge, in this city, yesterday, from Colonel Ilancon, commanding at Glasgow, Kentucky, saying that a company of the 37th Kentucky mounted infantry, under the command of Captain Stone, had returned from a successful scout beyond the Cumberland river. At Celina, in the edge of Tennessee, the company had a fight with the guerrilla band of the notorious Hamilton. The Federal troops were victorious, scattering the band in all directions. Six of the guerrillas were made prisoners, and were sent to the latter, Hamilton, the wily chief of the band. This is indeed joyful news, for the name of Hamilton has long been a dead letter in the southern part of Kentucky. He has waged a petty warfare against the peaceful citizens of our State, and was actuated by but one principle—whole-some plunder. Though all his movements were marked with caution and celerity, yet not even an enthusiast—who excuses the principle to applaud the wild, romantic dash of guerrilla warfare—can find anything to admire in them. They were all planned for robbery, and the robbery for self-interest; no cause to plead for the act and palliate the crime. He never bolded a foot, but always skulked like a coward, from where lurked even the sign of danger. He only deals with the powerless and defenceless, and would not have sought at Celina had light afford him means of escape. He was trapped, and fight was the only alternative. We are sure the people on our border rejoice that the wily chief has at last been captured and his band dispersed.

A few days ago, W. Scott Glore, news editor, advised that he would soon be prepared to fill orders for the work of Miss Sallie Rochester Ford, entitled "Romance and Rival's of Morgan and his Men." Immediately after the advertisement appeared, a communication was received at the headquarters of the Post Commandant, dated "Headquarters Provost Marshal, Fifth Congressional District, Kentucky, March 13," calling attention to Mr. Glore's notice, and entering a protest against the circulation of the work in Kentucky. The communication was signed by "G. W. Womack, Captain and Provost Marshal, Fifth Congressional District; Will R. Harvey, Commissioner, and T. S. Bell, Surgeon." Under date of March 18th, Colonel S. D. Bruce referred the communication to headquarters District of Kentucky, commanding that the circulation of the work be prohibited. The same date, General Burbridge passed an endorsement on the communication, referring it back to Colonel Bruce, with orders to suppress the sale of the book in the city of Louisville, and to notify W. Scott Glore that he will not be permitted to bring the publication to this city. Colonel Bruce immediately acted on the order by notifying Mr. Glore, the facts,

The District of Kentucky has been divided into two military divisions, the Eastern and Western. The Western division includes the city of Louisville, the transportation along the Ohio river, and all west of the road, to be under the command of Brigadier-General Hugh Ewing. The Eastern division embraces all of the territory of the old district, east of the railroad. No commander has yet been appointed for the division, but it is presumed, that one of the Generals in the field with troops, will receive the appointment. General Burbridge remains in command of the district, the General officers of the two divisions reporting to him. This arrangement will insure more attention to the defense of the State, and with General Burbridge chief in command, we may rest assured that no pains will be spared to effect a systematic working of all the different departments in the district.

The Feast of Purim, a Jewish festival of joyful remembrance, will be observed tomorrow. The festival was instituted by Mordecai, the son of Ida, the agitator of the Queen Esther, wife of Abasander, King of Persia, to celebrate the deliverance of the Israelites from the designs of Haman. It is named because, beginning in the first month, Nisan, they cast Pur, or lot, for an entire year before Haman. The full particular of the establishment of this feast is recorded in the last chapter of the book of Esther.

The 4th Kentucky cavalry, Col. Wickliffe Cooper, has already come to the front. A large number of recruits will leave this place on Tuesday to join the regiment. This was the former Kentucky regiment in the re-enlistment, and its gallant and accomplished Colonel has always distinguished himself not only by his chirality upon some of the greatest and most glorious battle-fields of the war but by his uniform devotion to the comfort and the welfare of his men.

Major-General Schofield, commanding the Department of the Ohio, has ordered that all recruits passing through Louisville for his department shall be equipped and furnished with arms in this city, before they are forwarded to his front. Col. Bruce, by direction of General Burbridge, is entrusted with the execution of the order.

MEETING OF PHYSICIANS.—The physicians of the city are requested to meet (this morning) in the basement story of the Christian Church, corner of Fourth and Walnut streets, at 10 o'clock, for the purpose of paying respects to their departed colleague Prof. J. B. Flint.

THE Chatanooga Gazette says, from the 22d of February to the 13th instant, 843 refugees have gone North by the cars from that place.

Capt. J. P. Watson, 10th Illinois has been appointed adjt on the staff of General Palmer.

CHAMP FERGUSON'S GUERRILLA ROBBERY.—(Continued from page 2.)

THE GREAT MILTONIAN TABLATURE OF "PARADISE LOST."—(Continued from page 2.)

DEATH OF PROFESSOR J. B. FLINT.—The news of the death of Prof. Flint reached this community early on Sunday morning. He was a very energetic professor, but during his residence here, he retired home to recuperate, ate very sparingly, went from the table into his office, where he was soon after seized with pleurisy, and died about seven o'clock Saturday morning. He was one of the most eminent men in his profession in the United States, and was esteemed by his mulititudinous virtues to his professional brethren and to the whole community. We shall endeavor hereafter to do some justice to the memory of this worthy man. In another column will be found the proceedings of the Medical Faculty of the University of Louisville, in which institution Professor Flint held the chair of Clinical Surgery. The physicians are to hold a meeting at 10 o'clock this morning to express their sentiments toward Prof. Flint.

GENERAL McCLELLAN'S REPORT.—It turns out that the alleged omission in the Congressional edition of General McClellan's Report do not in fact exist. The allegation was a mistake. The matter supposed to be missing is found, and found in a proper context, though not in the precise context which embraces the matter in the edition of Sheldon & Company. We very gladly make this correction. We will add that the edition of the report issued by the Boston Courier, and for sale by W. F. Thompson & Company in this city, is one of the most accurate as well as one of the very cheapest editions that had yet appeared.

THE notorious robber and guerrilla chief Dick Bowles has at last met with his just deserts. He was killed a few days ago, seven miles from Gilbertsville, Lexington county, Alabama, by Ira O. Tuttle, the young and daring chief of scouts of the Army of the Cumberland. Tuttle sought Bowles, and represented himself as willing to engage in any scheme of murder and plunder which might be proposed. Bowles was disarmed of suspicion, and related to Tuttle a short history of his life, in which he boasted of the many acts of plunder in which he had engaged, and the deliberate murders he had committed. Tuttle heard him mutter, and carefully asked to examine the revolver which Bowles had idly shown him through the fingers of his roving, calloused hands. Tuttle coolly cocked the pistol, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tutte pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief. He fell dead without a groan. Tutte immediately retreated from the scene of the combat, and informed Bowles who he was, and drew his watch from his pocket, said: "You have just one minute and a half to live; if you wish to mumble a prayer to God, knock down, and be expedited, for by my soul, you die!" Bowles made a low movement to grasp the pistol, when Tuttle pulled the trigger, and the ball penetrated the brain of the guerrilla chief.

